A Few Reflections From a Trip to the Great Metropolis.

New York, February 22, 1890.
Some days since I left Hopkinsville with a full determination to follow my inclinations and you can readily see where I have been led. I stopped over a day in Louisville and found this growing city still alive to the progressive inclinations. The Commercial Club building, ten stories high, has been completed to the top, yet it will require several months to fit it up for occupancy. This building is a monument to the energy and ambition of Louisville's young business men who founded the Commercial Club, and who have done a wonderful work in the development of this beautiful and prosperous city.

After seeing and passing smiles with many of the railroad boys and other acquaintances I took leave for Cincinnati, where I found everything in a business whirl and no abatement in the movements of the wholesale and retail trade, which afford an enormous volume of business. Filling in the day fairly well and being just on time to catch the C. & O. pet, the F. V. V., for Newport News, I left much relieved with the prospect of such a palatial ride for 24 hours. These famous vestibuled trains, notwithstanding the dullness of the traveling season, go out full every day, which is proof of the preference the traveling public give them.

Passing on through the grand panorama of scenery my thoughts returned to the many pleasant excursions I had accompanied on their delightful trips, and how they enjoyed with wonderful delight the landwork of nature. My intention being to go via the Old Dominion steamer, I found it necessary to go on to Norfolk from which point she would sail. Being a little late I missed the steamer, and of necessity was compelled to lose a day's time, so I cast about for the best mode of killing time. Learning that the new cruiser, Baltimore, was lying at the U. S. Navy Yard at Portsmouth, I made up my mind to look upon her and see how Uncle Sam was making preparation to knock 'em out. I found her lying beside the dock having her guns put on deck. She was built at Philadelphia and her guns and carriages made at Portsmouth. It has taken five weeks to put three carriages and one gun on board. She carries six guns and they are so constructed as to be instantly shifted to any range. It requires 100 tons of coal for fuel and 400 men to man her. With all of this powerful weight she only draws seven feet of water at bow and nine feet at center. Her machinery is so perfect and noiseless that on her trip down from Philadelphia, I am told, was scarcely perceptible she was moving. Her appearance is that of being top-heavy, but as a thorough inspection has been given I presume she would stand the storm.

Norfolk, though an old time place, can boast of a fine Y. M. C. A. building, which is supplied with an auditorium, social room, parlor, library, sitting room, game room and a model gymnasium. It is truly a luxury to the traveler to visit such a place and find a warm welcome and plenty of reading matter with which to kill time. The Y. M. C. A. do a wonderful amount of good.

The steamer Guyardotte being being ready to sail I passed through the city and exchange a few words with Col. J. S. Culpender, who so well performs the duty of general agent at Norfolk, and who is ever watchful of the passengers of the O. D., and then I go aboard just in time to catch the faint sound of the gong which summoned me to the last meal of the day. It is needless to mention the bill of fare, for so many people who will read this have fared sumptuously on this line and know of the excellence of the service. It all that can be desired. After supper she sets sail and we ply gently out of Hampton Roads, pass Old Point with her thousands of lights glimmering, then through the capes and we are fairly at sea. Fortunately the waters were not rough so nothing out of the usual routine happened, and no one on board grumbled. The Old Dominion is a favorite line for travel, but during the winter months passengers seem a little afraid of the waters. The steamer rounded into the dock about 7 p. m. and I at once started for the Continental Hotel, 20th and Broadway, where I am handsomely quartered. The Continental, while on Broadway and in the fashionable part, gives its patrons the benefit of reasonable rates and the restaurant attached boasts of superior service at modest prices, consequently it is always crowded.

W. A. W. LIGHT FOR THE BLIND.

A Luxury That Gives Great Satisfaction to the Inmates of Asylums.
You have probably often seen blind asylums brilliantly lighted at night, and you have probably just as often wondered why the blind required such a luxury. An inquisitive reporter recently ascertained that the blind are not deprived of their sight to such an extent as is generally supposed. Superintendents and managers of asylums are aware of this fact and know all the little foibles and petty tricks of their wards. The blind are most mischievous at the very time when one would think them to be the least troublesome—that is, in the evening. The superintendents in this city understand this and order all the gas jets in the institution to be lighted promptly at sundown. All the tricky ones are then watched by the janitors as carefully as Tabby does the mouse. Most of the blind have some powers of eyesight, and light rays, as a rule, can be readily perceived by them. They know that when all the lights are going at full blaze they can not cut up any pranks, and that all the books with heavy print, which they can take to bed and read far into the night, are taken away from them. These are the principal reasons why the passers-by see all the lights burning in the rooms of the blind asylum. But there is another and special reason. Guardians of the blind state that the latter derive a great amount of comfort from the light. Many of them can perceive rays, and that is the only gratification left to their impaired vision. As soon as they are introduced they wait patiently for the gas or lamps to be lighted and then make under the illumination that is sensible to their eyes.

Superintendents find it hard to divide the blind into distinct classes, according to the degrees of blindness. There is one continuous gradation from the totally blind to those who can see to read large type. The blind are divided into three classes by those who come in daily contact with them. The first class is composed of those who can not perceive light of the greatest intensity. They are devoid of the comfort which light gives. The highest test to prove total lack of vision is to place the blind person in the direction of lightning during a thunder storm, and if the flash is not perceived this proves that the sense of vision is entirely gone.

In the second class are those who can perceive and appreciate light and can see only the barest outline of the things around them. These are fed with illumination and want it most. Regularly at sundown, they seek the chairs nearest to the light, and draw ineffable comfort from it.

The third class can not only distinguish light, but can also partially read and discern the features of their friends. This class is by far the most troublesome. They do not especially care for gas light, sometimes because it interferes with their little plans of mischief. The janitors always make it a point to light the gas in their rooms and keep their idle brains out of mischief.

Light and music are the blind person's chief delights. All the lost powers of vision are almost compensated for by the extraordinary sense of harmony and time. A peculiar musical talent and gift are apportioned to the blind, and secure for them positions of note. Many piano tuners are blind. In Paris nearly all the head piano tuners are blind persons. The same is true in Boston, where all of the pianos in the public schools are tuned by the blind. —Albany (N. Y.) Argus.

"Hunger has no ears," hence wisdom must give first place to dinner.
"A rolling stone gathers no moss," but it "gets over" a great deal.
"Every man is the architect of his own fortune," which saves all chance of hard feeling on account of competitive examinations.
"Faithful are the wounds of a friend," and there are none more punctiliously given.

"A miss is as good as a mile," but a Mrs. is as good as a league.
"The pavement of Hades is relaid the first of every January."
"Sic semper tyranni" may be freely rendered: "The sick always are tyrants."

"Love goes out at the window when poverty enters the door," but should poverty retire by the door; it is amazing with what celerity love comes scrambling in at the window.
"Time and tide wait for no man," but when a woman is in the case, even time and tide must wait or go on without her.

"All men are born free and equal," but unfortunately some men are born equal to two or three of their fellows.
"Fridge goes before a fall," and the "winter of discontent" comes after.
"A poet is born, not made," and yet women persist in writing rhymes.
"God helps them that help themselves," so that drummers at hotel tables are sure of the assistance of Heaven.
"He that is down need fear no fall," because feathers fall so softly.
"The blind can not lead the blind," and as justice and love both have bandaged eyes, neither can guide the other.

Many men who profess to pass their lives in the pursuit of virtue are apt to take care to keep so far behind that there is no danger whatever of their overtaking her.
And speaking of proverbs, there is nothing easier than the manufacture of pseudo-proverbs. If one will only give his mind to it, as witness the following, which, if not very good, at least serve well enough for illustration:
"A man may wear epaulettes, and be only a drummer in the band."

BALLOT REFORM.

How to Eradicate Some of the Iniquities of Political "Game Work."
This is one of the reforms which must come, for without it our system of popular government can not be maintained. Every election, especially in our large cities, shows that until this reform is secured all other reforms are impossible of accomplishment. The control of the election machinery, of the printing and distributing of the ballots, must be taken from the politicians and put into the hands of the State. That is, we must take the power to control our elections away from the men who have no responsibility and no interest in government save extraneous gain and corruption and put it into the hands of officials who are sworn to do their duty. Of what use is it to try to get honest men nominated for office when we leave in the hands of the political workers the power to defeat them at the polls by distributing fraudulent or defective ballots, or by making "deals" and "dickers" which cheat the people of their will? We have talked for years about reforming the primaries and the nominating conventions, but not one particle of progress has been made. Under the Massachusetts law any four hundred voters, in case of a candidate for State office, and any one hundred voters, in case of a candidate for a lesser office, by uniting in a petition in behalf of a candidate of their choice, can have his name printed upon the official ballots and have those ballots distributed at the polls at the public expense. What more certain way of reforming the primaries could be devised than this? If there were such a law in New York City there would be an end to the astonishing spectacle which is there so often presented of "boss" setting up a candidate of his own for office in spite of all protests, and frequently electing him in spite of all opposition. Under such a law both "bosses" and primaries would in a very short time lose their present dominance in our politics.

In fact, there is scarcely a form of inquiry known to our election methods which a good ballot law would not eradicate. We should be rid at one stroke of the assessments upon candidates, of the bribery and bulldozing of voters, of the nomination of notoriously unfit candidates, of "deals" and "dickers," and "trades" at the polls. All these would disappear, for the simple reason that the machinery of elections would be taken out of the hands of irresponsible and often dishonest men. Such an obvious and imperative reform as this can not be long delayed.—Century.

Religion of Our Presidents.

While the Constitution expressly forbids the establishment of any religious test for office-holders, it is pleasant to record that all high officers of State have been church members. During the last campaign it was notable that four of the candidates were sons of fathers who were Presbyterians, one was a Presbyterian clergyman, Allen G. Tamm's father a Baptist minister, Levi P. Morton's father a Congregationalist, and John A. Brooks is the son of a Methodist minister. The religious belief of the twenty-two Presidents who have ruled over the destinies of this nation, have been as follows: Washington, a Methodist; Monroe, Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, Buchanan and Arthur were Episcopians; Jefferson, John Adams, John Q. Adams and Fillmore were Unitarians; Jackson, Polk and Lincoln were Presbyterians, as is also the present incumbent, President Cleveland; Van Buren was of the Dutch Reformed Church; Pierce a Trinitarian Congregationalist; Johnson, Grant and Hayes were Catholics, and Garfield attended the Church of the Christian Brethren. —Golden Days.

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES.

How a Philadelphia Hebrew Advertiser His Clothing Store.
While coming up Market street the other day in the face of a sweeping rain, what was my astonishment upon seeing a prominent clothing store to see a blue flag waving in front of the building, with "clear and fair weather" on it in large white letters. I thought, however, that the proprietor had forgotten to take it down and passed on. It was still raining when I approached the place next day. The same flag was fluttering merrily in the breeze in spite of the terrible falsehood it had written on its face. My curiosity was aroused, and I decided to learn, if possible, what object the proprietor could have in allowing it to remain there. I entered the store and asked him the question plainly. At first he gave me evasive answers, but finally he became confidential and said: "That is one of the very best advertisements I ever had. When it rains I put out the 'clear' flag, and when it is clear vice versa. People passing along the street, and noticing the apparent mistake come into the store and ask me about it. That is when my clerks get in their work, and there are few days when they do not sell from one to five more suits than they otherwise would. You know the difficult thing is to get customers inside the door. Why, I wouldn't give those flags for a half dozen barbers," and they don't make half the noise." —Philadelphia News.

THE FIRST ROTHSCHILDS.

Unfavorable Circumstances Under Which He Started in Life.

Few boys ever started in life under more unfavorable circumstances, and with less prospect of fame and fortune, than Meyer Anselm, the founder of the great banking-house of Rothschild, and the man of whom Wilhelm, Landgrave of Hesse, exclaimed in his enthusiasm, "Such honesty never has been known in this world!" Not only was Meyer Anselm poor, but he belonged to the then despised and persecuted race, the Jews. Living in this later day, when much of the hatred and prejudice felt against the Jews has given way to more just and liberal sentiments, we can hardly understand with what extreme contempt and loathing they were treated in young Anselm's day. As a specimen of it, however, we read that in Frankfurt-on-the-Main, the city where he was born, the Jews were so detested by the other inhabitants that they were compelled to live in a certain quarter which was shut in by gates. During the day they might go about, but at night they must all retire to their own quarters, and there the gates were locked, so that they should not venture out again until morning. If by any chance a Jew was found outside the "Judenquartier" after a certain hour he was put to death. Think what chance a poor little lad like this had of becoming one of the wealthiest and most distinguished personages of his age! Yet he did it, and that too by no other means than behaving with the utmost uprightness and honesty.

To add to his other misfortunes, young Anselm found himself at the age of eleven an orphan. Now his prospect was darker than ever, for the Jews are nearly always kind to their children, and do all that they can to give them a start in the world. In some way or other, however, he secured some little education, and as a young man we find him employed in a banking-house in the town of Hanover. He was in no hurry to go into business for himself, as so many young men are, as it is not until he is in his thirtieth year that we find him back in Hanover, established as a broker and a money-lender, with a red shield (Rothschild) as a sign hung over his shop. Here he did an excellent business, establishing the reputation for honesty that led to his good fortune.

So enormous is the amount of business done and the influence exerted by the Rothschilds that it is currently said of them that on two or three occasions they have successfully exerted themselves to preserve the peace of Europe. Their house now has its establishments in London, Paris, Vienna and Frankfurt, and its agencies in New York and other great cities in both hemispheres. Their name is a synonym for wealth in earlier days it stood and still stands for fair dealing. —Harper's Young People.

He says that when they become educated on the subject, with the aid of the object lessons being constantly placed before them, there need be no fear as to their conclusions.

The work of both Stevenson and McKenzie, gentlemen in private life, was entirely legitimate, and showed that the Chicago people knew whom to secure for effective service. It is said that they each received $300 per week and expenses."

TOOK ONLY $60,000.

Wm. H. Pope, Teller of a Louisville Bank,

Makes His Way to Canada With That Amount of the Bank's Money.

The non-appearance at his post of Wm. H. Pope, Teller of the Louisville National Bank, last Monday morning was accounted for at 10 o'clock when the President and other bank officials opened the vault and examined the cash. A hasty overhauling showed that the funds were between $40,000 and $60,000 short. The suspicion of the officers that something was wrong with their trusted teller was at once confirmed and steps taken to find out where the unfaithful Pope had gone. It was ascertained that Pope had not been at his place of business after leaving at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, though he had been told by the Cashier to be on hand Monday morning a little earlier than usual. When he left Saturday there was nothing unusual in his manner. He had his overcoat on and his hands hung loose at his side. It is now believed that he had the money on his person at the time, as it was hardly possible for him to have gotten possession of it afterwards, though the Cashier is inclined to the opinion that he returned and got it Saturday after everybody had left. Be it as it may, there is no doubt now that the bank is $60,000 short.

Detectives were at once set to work, photographs of the absconding teller sent to all points, but the Courier-Journal reporters were the first to find what direction he had taken. Shortly after 7 o'clock Pope was seen to enter the Union Depot with a small black valise in his hand and secure a lower berth in a sleeper for Chicago. It was afterwards learned that Pope did not go to Chicago, but went to Cincinnati, and is now believed to be safe in Canada.

It is evident that Pope had been making his plans to rob the bank for some time, as he had very lately discussed the extradition treaty with the local agent of the Fidelity & Casualty Trust Company of New York, which was on his bond for $20,000, the full amount required of him.

Pope entered the service of the bank as clerk in 1881. His efficiency won for him promotion after promotion until he was made Teller two years ago. He was fully trusted, and would have been the last of the employees to whom suspicion would attach. He was 38 years old and was born eight miles from the city on the narrow-gauge railroad. He has led a fast life and spent considerable money on women and in winning his friends, as well as gambling a great deal, says the correspondent of the Nashville American. The Courier-Journal paints him differently—leading a sort of Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde life. It is believed that when he is located in Canada he will be arrested for carrying stolen money into the Dominion, and that most of it will be recovered, as he probably has nearly the full amount with him.

The business of the bank is no way affected, as it has a capital of $400,000, which would have been entrusted at any time to the man who has proven so unfaithful.

The latest in regard to Pope is that, though the entire detective force of the United States and the Canadian and Mexican borders are on the alert, nothing has been ascertained of his whereabouts.

A strict examination of his books shows that they were perfectly straight. His ability for spending so much money is accounted for by the fact that he was one of the best paid tellers in Louisville, and besides he had a good private income.

The $60,000 that he carried away belonged to the reserve fund of the bank, and consisted entirely of bills of large denominations, which he had been accumulating for some time. Piles of gold and silver and bills of small denominations were left untouched.

He was not in debt and has no sympathy among his late friends. By his robbery he has darkened the declining years of his old parents and cast a shadow over the bed of a dying sister.

Com. vs. M. Brandon, indictment changed to read William Brandon and Bud Stonam, and case continued.

L. R. Salmon, carrying concealed deadly weapon, a plea of guilty entered and fine of $25 assessed, with ten days imprisonment in the county jail.

The case of the Commonwealth against W. B. Long, charged with assaulting H. Clay McCord, at Crofton, on election day about two years ago, was called Wednesday morning. The case was submitted to the court, which fined Long $30 and cost. Last September McCord sued Long for $10,000 on account of the lick received, recovering one cent and costs. The former case was decided by a jury.

Three very timely and important subjects are treated in the March Century by specialists. The first is the subject of Municipal Government, Dr. Albert Shaw describing the workings of the local government of Glasgow, one of the world's model cities in this respect. The subject of Irrigation is treated in the first of a series of three articles by Professor Powell, the Director of the United States Geological Survey. This paper is entitled "The Irrigable Lands of the Arid Region." The third great subject is discussed in a paper by Professor Fisher on "The Nature and Method of Revelation"—the concluding one in his very timely series. The same number of The Century has editorials on "Municipal Government," "Our Sins Against France," and "University Extension."

Here it is, and it fills the bill much better than anything we could say: "It gives me the greatest pleasure to write you in regard to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. During the past winter I have sold more of it than any other kind, and have yet to find any one but what was benefited by taking it. I have never had any medicine in my store that gave such universal satisfaction." J. M. ROYER, Druggist, Geuda Springs, Kansas. 50 cent bottles for sale by Buckner Leavell.

This state of case is much regretted, but cannot be remedied.

PAUL ELLIS MISSED.

He Disappeared Last Monday Morning.

Diligent Search Fails to Find Any Definite Traces of Him.

The family of Mr. Allen Ellis, who lives on Ninth street next to the Methodist church, were greatly alarmed last Monday morning on account of the absence from home of Paul, who, it was soon learned, had mysteriously disappeared. After considerable inquiry the fact was plain that he had gone—no one knew where.

Soon his father and brothers commenced a diligent search, but could learn nothing definite as to what had become of him. The last time he was seen was by Judge W. P. Winfree. At that time he was going out South Virginia street. During Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the surrounding country was scoured, but nothing could be learned of him.

Wednesday a young man answering to his description stepped into a store at Howell and asked the privilege of warming himself at the stove, when he was asked to sit down, but he declined, saying that he had only stepped in to stay long enough to warm himself.

The clerk afterwards went into the back room of the store for a few minutes, and when he returned to the front the youth was gone. It is not certain that the young man was Paul, though it is believed it was.

Afterwards a young man of his appearance was seen at Garrettsburg by Squire John White. Mr. White, believing that it was a young man of the neighborhood, called to him but received no answer. He only turned his head when Mr. White saw at once that it was not the person he took him for. Mr. White then asked him to excuse him for hailing him, when the young man remarked that it was "all right" and proceeded on his way.

Wednesday morning his mysterious disappearance was bulletined at this office. Something over an hour after it was reported that he had been found and was seen riding with his father in the city limits. This was corroborated by two or three parties, and some one reported the circumstance to this office, when the bulletin was taken down.

His reported return was not true. It was caused by parties mistaking Mr. Ellis, one of his brothers, for Paul, who with his father had been out searching for him. Up to this writing (Thursday 11 a. m.) no clue of him save the one mentioned, has been found. This is very vague and unsatisfactory. Search is still being made for him, and his distressed family have very little to hope for. They ask anyone who has seen him to communicate with them at once.

Paul has been in the law office of Judge Jo McCarroll for about two years, acting as stenographer. He has been studying short-hand for some time and is quite an expert type-writer. He has been a close student with the view of entering the ministry when he had qualified himself. He has always borne an enviable reputation as to morality. He has never mixed with young people, always being reserved and not seeking the companionship of those of his age—rather avoiding it. His disappearance is attributed to ill health, as for a long time he has seemed gloomy and despondent. So far as we have learned he has never been a victim of mental aberration. The moroseness of his disposition was quite manifest to those who knew him, but all looked upon him as a strictly moral, Christian young man—one who had no desire to engage in the frivolities and pleasures of youth.

We earnestly hope that he may soon be found and returned to his distressed mother, father, brothers and sister. It is a great blow to them but it may yet not be as bad as they apprehend.

DESCRIPTION.

Paul is about 5 feet 11 inches in height, rather slender and very erect; his face is thin and youthful; complexion ruddy and a little freckled; black hair and eyes; his manner is taciturn and modest, though his speech, when he does talk, is quick and pointed. He is an unusually intelligent youth and his education is excellent.

LATER.

A telegram was received by Mr. John G. Ellis from a friend at Clarksville, at 1:45 p. m. yesterday stating that Paul was there but in a bad condition mentally.

CREAM OF NEWS.

Lucky John Feland, Jr.

Good luck, like misfortune, hardly ever comes single handed. The Republican nominee for County Attorney, John Feland, Jr., was gladdened last Saturday by receiving notice from Washington that he had been appointed special census agent for Kentucky.

His duties under this appointment will be to furnish the department with the recorded indebtedness of the State. He has the power of appointing quite a number of assistants and will finish his work in ninety days. He will make his headquarters here, and will do his work in the most efficient manner. This appointment will in no way interfere with his making the canvass for the office of County Attorney, for which position he received the hearty endorsement of his party last Saturday.

Captured a Mule Thief.

Milton Turner, col., alias Babb, was arrested in the city late Monday afternoon by Chief Ennis, on a charge of mule stealing. The mule was taken from the stable of a man living near Springfield, Tenn., and sold to Mr. Bowling, at Guthrie. Bowling was sent for and identified Turner as the man who sold him the mule and the mule was fully identified by the owner. Turner was taken to Springfield Tuesday to answer the serious charge. It seems he is rather an old offender, having served one term in the "pen" for a similar offense and has also had "other cases" in court, which somewhat annoyed him for several months.

Will of Mrs. M. C. Edmunds.

The last will and testament of Mrs. M. C. Edmunds was admitted to probate Monday, in the County Clerk's office. The will was drawn up in the year 1884 and provides for the payment of all just debts, after which all of her property shall remain intact until John T., her youngest son, becomes of age, when the entire estate is to be equally distributed among her four children. Jas. H. Moore, of New York City, and her daughter Mary are made guardians to her infant heirs, and Mr. Moore is made executor. The estate left is a large and valuable one.

Meeting of the City Council.

The regular monthly meeting of the Council was held last Tuesday. Nothing of importance was before the meeting except a request from the Chief of the fire department that the body appropriate a sufficient amount to furnish sleeping apartments for four members of the fire company. This was laid over for consideration at the next regular meeting.

The clerk was directed to correspond with parties for 500 additional feet of hose.

Fought With Axes.

Frank Wood and Horace Lee, living just across the Caldwell line, had a bloody fight Tuesday afternoon, axes being the weapons used. Wood lost an ear and his neck was badly lacerated and gashed. He was left in an unconscious condition. Lee was also cut and bruised. The trouble leading to the fight is said to have been caused by remarks made by Wood concerning one of Lee's relatives.
